

Encana Courtesy Notice

The Colorado Oil and Gas Conservation Commission (COGCC) adopted new Rule 603.h for oil and gas operations located within a floodplain. This floodplain rule requires operators to take several steps to meet the requirements of operating within a floodplain, including anchoring all production tanks.

Encana has notified the Town of Erie that starting next week, Encana representatives will be working near the Erie Village and Kenosha Farms neighborhoods, anchoring the production tanks on these sites. This work is weather dependent but should take just two days per well pad to complete. On site activity will include a tractor, large truck and trailer, and a few worker trucks. All work will be done during daylight and weekday hours.

Please note that this activity is not related to new drilling or completion operations.
